Social Media and Hate Speech

Hate speech via social media is not only a form of criminal behaviour, but is also a major public health concern. It can also lead to physical violence and other harms. It is important to understand the impact of hate speech on individuals and communities.

Enhancing Civil Society

Civil society organizations can play a critical role in countering hate speech. They can do so by raising awareness, providing education and training, and creating spaces for dialogue.

Social Media Hate Speech Mitigation Field Guide

This guide provides a framework for mitigating hate speech on social media platforms. It includes best practices and case studies from various organizations around the world.

Facilitating Change - Enabling Intercultural Dialogue

It is important for communities to come together to address hate speech and promote understanding. This can be done through events, workshops, and other community-building activities.

Raising Awareness of Hate Speech Online

Hate speech is not just a problem off-line, but also on social media. It is important to raise awareness about the impact of hate speech online and to promote positive online behaviour.

Building Organisational Capacities

Organizations can be more effective in countering hate speech by investing in training and capacity building. This can include training on hate speech prevention, as well as on how to use social media effectively.

Bweyale - Engaging Youth

Engaging youth in the conversation about hate speech is critical. Youth are often targets of hate speech, and they can also play a role in preventing it.

Social Media #Peaceam

Social media platforms can be used as tools for conflict resolution and peacebuilding. This can be done through online dialogues, mediation, and other forms of digital diplomacy.

ThinkBU4Click (Think Before U Click)

ThinkBU4Click is a campaign to encourage people to think before they click on a link. It is important to verify the source of a link before sharing it online.

Encouraging Reconciliation

Encouraging reconciliation is crucial in promoting peace and understanding. This can be done through dialogue, education, and other forms of engagement.

The training has inspired me to start an initiative to promote anti-hate speech both online and offline. How can help that continue working for peace throughout the world? What are the steps to implementing anti-hate speech policies?
